ABSTRACT

This bibliography lists 1,721 reports and publications that examine adult education in at least two countries and were published between 1945 and 1995. The oldest publications date from 1949, and the final 44 documents listed constitute a partial list of the international comparative adult education publications published in 1996. Publications are in a variety of languages, including the following: English, French, German, Polish, Serbo-Croatian, Czech, and Italian. Selected topics of the publications listed are as follows: progress in literacy; vocational training for adults; lifelong learning; parent education; educational practices in specific countries; educational television; delivery of adult education in various settings; adult education activities in libraries; access to adult education; adult education in rural and urban areas; residential adult education; adult education and leisure; workers in adult education; international developments in university education; the educational needs of adults in specific countries; agricultural extension; retraining; the effects of the social and economic environment on workers' education; adult self-learners; cultural influences in the diffusion of adult education; research methodologies; the relevance of comparative studies in adult education; models of nonformal education; comparative physical education and sport; andragogy; the use of selected classroom techniques and teaching methods with adult learners; popular education; and planning for the education of adults in developing countries. WORLD BIBLIOGRAPHY
ON INTERNATIONAL
COMPARATIVE ADULT EDUCATION
1945 – 1995

Compiled by Jindra Kulich

This bibliography was compiled at the request of the International Society for Comparative Adult Education at its meeting in Bamberg, Germany, in September 1995. Only materials employing international comparison, or at least covering more than one country, were included. Reports and publications examining adult education in only one country, be these written by adult educators in that country or from a perspective of a foreigner, were not included. In compiling the bibliography, the relative accessibility of the materials through university libraries was considered in the selection of the entries. Thus, personal visit reports and conference papers in typescript or photorepro form, and doctoral dissertations and master's theses were not included, unless actually published in print. Materials available only on microfilm, microfiche or in computer retrieval systems also were not included. The period of the coverage was chosen as from 1945 to 1995. The entries were categorized by the year of publication to document the growth in comparative publications since the end of the Second World War and to catalogue publishing activity in each year in this period. In spite of several attempts to obtain assistance regarding materials from Latin America and Asia, only Unesco publications dealing with these parts of the world and Japanese studies could be included in the bibliography. With reference to publications of the Council of Europe and its agencies, the European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training, and Unesco, I did not have access to complete records for publications issued by these bodies in translation(s) from the language of the original publication to the other official languages. Although most of the entries in this bibliography do list the appropriate page numbers, in a handful of cases where the entry was taken over from another source which did not list the page numbers, and where these could not be established from other sources available to me, the very useful page number information unfortunately had to be omitted. I would like to express my appreciation of and thanks for assistance he has received from the following colleagues: Michal Bron Jr., Zoran Jelenc, Joachim H. Knoll, Ana Krajnc, Alan B. Knox, Peter Monetti, Colin Titmus and Makoto Yamaguchi. The previous bibliographic work of Alexander N. Charters, Barry Elsey, Ursula Giere, Peter G. Haywood, Peter Liebl, Thomas Kelly, Ernst Richter, Dilnawaz A. Siddiqui, J.E. Thomas and Elaine Thompson, as well as my own extensive previous bibliographgic work, also was of great assistance in compiling this bibliography.
